photo courtesy: daniel Acker/Bloomberg via Getty Images we must have social media or the most important revolutions of the modern age. Arab Spring, the movement became widespread and also became the #IcebucketChallenge would not have been successful without the idea of social media. other social media trends, on the other hand, were completely ridiculous; most of these trends go and come in a flash, but new silly tendencies are popping up everywhere. before taking your next selfie at chernobyl, take a look at the stupidest trends ever existed on social media. Needless to say, please do not try any of the old social media trends, because they will not make you cooler (or safer). The event “Storm area 51, they canâ [t stop all of Us”In the summer of 2019, 2 million facebook users climbed on a virtual cart to assault the legendary area 51. The event, which ultimately attracted the attention of government officials, was removed from facebook after violating the guidelines of the community of the site. photo courtesy: christopher Morris/Corbis/Getty images The American army issued a threatening statement before the event, discouraging anyone from attempting to break into an area where they train armed forces. area 51 has remained an extraterrestrial mystery for decades, and it seems that the mystery will have to continue. This creepy trend only requires your mobile phone and lack of privacy concerns. all you have to do is send a message to your “next number” or “near message port” and share your social media exchange. your “numerical train” is someone with a different number from your phone number. photo courtesy: tammy McGary/Wikimedia commons sounds like harmless fun, but it's not exactly a smart move. If your “numerical train” is minor and you're not, you're entering arisky. Also, not everyone wants to meet their “text door neighbor”, so you might not like the response you get.Selfies a Serious Serious 2013, a Tumblr page launched in response to a bizarre trend writer Jason Feifer noted on vacation. During his visit to the Anne Frank Memorial, tourists of all ages took selfies in front of this historic place. That's how the Selfies were born in Serious Places. Photo Courtesy: Vladyslav Cherkasenko/Unsplash By highlighting the poor judgment behind these photos, Feifer's Tumblr page took selfies at concentration camps, funerals and Chernobyl, the new Internet fashion worthy of a thrill. This type of photo should not have been so ridiculed publicly, but at least the behavior has decreased accordingly. The v35; FireChallengeLa v35;FireChallenge of 2014 was one of the most dangerous and disastrous trends to invade social media. With the cameras moving, the participants gladly covered themselves in a flammable liquid and then set themselves on fire. Firefighters, police officers and social media sites have had to publicly denounce the practice in order to protect public safety. Photo Courtesy: Cullan Smith/Unsplash Unfortunately, this challenge has dragged on and caused serious damage. A 12-year-old girl suffered severe burns after trying the challenge with her friends. A teenager described post-combustion as'intolerable'. Please, if you're reading this, don't burn to see it. It's very dangerous and very stupid. The v35; WhatTheFluffChallengeThis nice but silly way to deceive your pets of trend in the summer of 2018. All you needed was a blanket and the attention of your dog or cat to play. Just lift the blanket in front of your pet, let them know you're right behind it and then drop the blanket as you rush into another room. Photo Courtesy: Sdf Rahbar/Unsplash is a quick trick that catches countless animals unannounced. Personally speaking, the best videos showed animals who didn't care about the joke at their expense. The real joke was about the person who made the video, who as a viewer, is much more The #FaceAppChallengeLa FaceApp became viral in 2017 and the first adapters were immediately attached to its age by altering Photoshop skills. In 2019, celebrities climbed on board and 80 million users immersed themselves in the #FaceAppChallenge. Going viral twice is a good result for only one application, but FaceApp fell prey to a dangerous internet voice right after its second wind. Photo Courtesy: Levi Elizaga/Unsplash According to a viral Tweet, a web developer warned users that the Russian-based app agreement allowed access to all photos of your phone. Even the photos you didn't use in the app. This has given the app a dangerous reputation, and news about the inaccuracy of Tweets has been much quieter than the false statement based on fear. The #CinnamonChallengeThis challenge, which actually dates back to 2001, is a bizarre abuse of a delicious spice. The challenge is simple: filmed while eating a cinnamon spoon in less than a minute without drinking anything to help you. After toxin and/or vomiting, charge the disordered massacre online. Photo Courtesy: June Andrei George/Unsplash The point of the challenge is to see people suffer from a terrible sore throat while cinnamon covers and dries the mouth. Most people end up spitting a cloud of tan powder in pain and possibly questioning their life choices later. Don't do this. It has the potential to cause long-term respiratory difficulties, pneumonia or lung collapse. The Harlem ShakeIn 2012, American DJ Bauer published his first uptempo dance track “Harlem Shake”. It was a captivating mix of trap, dance and bass music, but it didn't take foot until almost a year later. The reason? People started uploading clips on YouTube of themselves that get mad about the song. Photo Courtesy: Seven Shooter/Unsplash Harlem's memelt was simple enough to replicate. All you do is film a quiet room with people who seem busy or bored and then drive everyone crazy when the rhythm goes down. After Billboard Billboard By inserting images on YouTube of the songs into their rating system, Bauer was launched in point number 1. 35; KylieJennerChallenge in 2015, the reality TV star Kylie JennerÂ€ 128;Â the face looked very different. Many viewers have seen her grow since she was little, so it was amazing to see her on the red carpets with a new pair of lips. Photo Courtesy: Frazer Harrison/Getty Images Fans, social media followers, and the media mocked her for altering her appearance at such a young age. But then people tried to replicate her pout bonus by participating in the #KylieJennerChallenge. First you take a drink, then you put it on your lips and you suck. Doctors don't recommend doing this as you226; this particular trend has been happening for decades, but first of all the planting has captured the social media attention to 2009. Suddenly, everyone was sharing photos of themselves lying face-to-face in weird and hard-to-reach locations. The more bizarre the location, the better the planking photo. Photo Courtesy: theerin/Wikimedia Commons The trend captured in an important way. New Zealand226; Prime Minister John Key stood in front of his planking son, Max, and made the front page of the New Zealand Herald. He was immediately slammed for the ââââ killing the meme226. It looks like you canât be a powerful leader with a sense of humor.# sunurn Makeup and body art are the main players on Instagram. Having a blue belly or opaque foundation can gain some serious followers, but in 2015, trend setters have taken body art to a whole new level. People would strategically plump sunscreen on some parts of their body by letting other parts burn. The result? Sunurnart Photo Courtesy: Rajiv Bajaj/Unsplash It's sunburn for art, but it's a super damaging for your body. The Foundation Skin care has had to issue a statement in response to the growing trend, urging others not to do so. Burns can be very painful. But too many of them put a person at risk for the most dangerous form of skin cancer. Don't even do that. This trend is by far one of the most dangerous internet fads in the history of social media. Tide released their first packaging for individual size laundry berries in 2012, but the media carried out years later wild with the relationships that children have mistaken them for candy and could eat them. Courtesy photo: Austin Kirk/Wikimedia Commons Internet found the accusation funny, so people turned around filming themselves eating berries. The clips were quickly dismantled as the Tide Pod Challenge was no laughing matter. In less than a year, there were almost 8.000 cases of children poisoning themselves with laundry berries. Don't even make that trend. Hot Dog Legsln 2013, an Instagram commentary launched this popular, sea trend. When Tumblr user @andrewpauldavis saw a pair of legs in a bathtub, he thought they looked like hot dogs. Tumblr loved the view, and a page dedicated exclusively to selfies on the sea of bare legs that may or may not be hot dogs has been born. Courtesy photo: Annie Spratt/Unsplash The bronze skin, pink summer in the photos looks very similar to hot dogs, so sometimes it is challenging to differentiate hot dogs from legs. It is a bizarre and foolish trend of social media, but at least it does not put your body in a harmful way. This cat trend took Facebook from storm at the beginning of 2012. First, you take a piece of bread and cut a 1-inch hole bigger than your cat's head. Keep your cat calm as you gently place the bread around your cat's head. Take a picture. Then it becomes a social media legend. Courtesy photo: Manja Vitolic/Unsplash Some cat owners gave him a shot at various degrees of success. Other owners made they cat be a repercussions to interrupt your peaceful feline and avoid the trend. We are real, cats can be rather unpredictable. Leave your baby stay and don't waste food! Smashing Gallon This trend is not just stupid, but it's also Waste, Gallon Smashing requires two liters of milk and a total lack of shame. Often it takes place in a supermarket, the Gallon Smasher must first break the gallon's jugs to the ground and then pretend to slip. Photo Courtesy: Anita Jankovic/Unsplash The gold of social media comes twice: you can see someone fall and someone else turns to look surprised at the person who fell on purpose. I hate to sound like a buzzer, but someone needs to clean up after your stupid joke, and it's probably just about another one. That he's short. Also, again, don't food waste. Skyraschier Selfieses This could be the most dangerous type of selfies out there. Skyraschier's selfies require someone to scale taller buildings around and engage in extremely dangerous photo shots. Sometimes we refer to “~” this trend has really spread in Russia and Asia. Courtesy photos: Steve Gale/Unsplash Angelina Nikolau made a name for himself on social media thanks to his countless selfies skyscrapers in Eastern Europe and Asia. This trend is not for the weak of heart, or for anyone with sweaty hands while watching other people- 128;spraschier selfies. Flash MobsYou know you226; ve seen a flash mob. Since their debut in 2003, it is likely that you have also participated in them. They're the viral dance routine in the center of Times Square. The choreographed marriage proposals in lane 3 of Home Depot. They226; 128; they are viral videos on social media where a large group of people gather to do something completely random and then leave immediately after. Photo Courtesy: Scott Barbour/Getty Images Perhaps the most amazing thing about flash mobs is that the226; ancora is still happening. Social media trends have a shelf life of about three days, so it's wild to see flash mob in 2019 out in the wild. They226; they have become great tools forbig protests, as the bizarre behavior can be exploited to draw attention to worthy causes. 35; InMyFelingsChallengeese has a lot of people to thank thank thank the success of his 2018 hit “In My Felings226;” Don't misunderstand us, it's a certified bop. But it was in226; 128;t; until the #InMyFelingsChallenge became viral that his song exceeded the cards. Photo Courtesy: M.Kolchins/IMDb Heren226; 128;s as it works: while someone drives (and movies), the passenger jumps out of the car on the move, leaving the door open so he can beg Keke as Drake. There are so many dangerous clips of this viral trend that is going wrong that highway signs have gone on encouraging people to stay in their cars. Chubby BunnyThe game is simple: every person takes a turn by showing a marshmallow in his mouth and saying, “ Chubby Bunny. â This goes on until the mouth is so stuffed that it can no longer contain marshmallow. Or until you can no longer say “ Chubby Bunny. Photo Courtesy: CC BY-SA 3.0/Wikimedia Commons This stupid trend can be untidy, so watch out for any outfit you're wearing. Also â donât choke on the marshmallows. Whoever thought of this game is still a mystery, but there was a 1959 peanut comic where Snoopy filled the mouth of marshmallow. Just to say. The Condom Snoorting Challenge This is another bizarre case of “~”. Both parents and doctors were at war in 2018 when children on social media made the Condom Snotting Challenge. The trend is exactly as it seems, and yes, it226; 128; b is absolutely stupid to do. Photo Courtesy: AFP Contringer/Getty Images According to doctors, the greatest risk is that sniffing condoms can be a serious risk of choking. As terrible as it may sound, it may also end up in the throat and cause infections. So please, guys, find a safer way to impress others and cheat death at your next social meeting. Mannequin Challenge Another successful song, another viral on social media. In 2016, the rap duo Rae Sremmurd released the music video for Throughout the video, people stay completely still while the camera moves around them. Everyone was watching. models. Photo Courtesy: Husam Abualshaikh/Wikimedia Commons The inspiration for social media was enough and the #MannequinChallenge was born. People everywhere were putting together their versions of the video with the music in the background. Millions of views later, Rae Sremmurd got a #1 song on the Billboard charts.The 24-hour night challengeDo you know where your teen is sleeping? If they are looking to complete the 24-Hour Overnight Challenge, then the answer is probably “No.” This is the point of the challenge: teenagers and young adults in 2016 started camping overnight in chain stores and restaurants. Photo Courtesy: Alina Grubnyak/Unsplash All you have to do is sneak in before closing time and hide unnoticed until the next day. This is another trend on social media that parents will not approve of, as children do so without parental permission. An 11-year-old British boy, for example, caused a massive police hunt in 2018, but it turns out he was camping in an IKEA Cats vs. cucumbersIn 2015, people needed a new way to irritate their cats. Enter Cats vs. Cetrioli. The premise is very simple: while your cat is busy eating or licking itself, put a cucumber just outside its line of sight. When she sees him, hopefully, your camera's on. Photo Courtesy: Harshal S. Hirve/Unsplash Sometimes cats jump in terror. Sometimes nothing happens. But should you do this to your pet? Experts on cat behavior have done their part, saying that scaring animals in their feeding areas can stress them and cause harmful and long-term damage to their safety. Once again, stop messing with your pets!The Challenge of the Shooting StarsThis trend of social media was a matter of extravagance. And he looks hurt. To get the right picture, all you had to do was look like you fell on your face with your possessions scattered around you. It started in Russia and evolved into a contest to show how incredibly rich you are Photo Courtesy: Bruce Christianson / unsplash In the end, the world of social media was taken on an assault, and the less fortunate gave a turn to the trend. Instead of showing out the designer's clothes and jewelry, people would show the articles that talked more at their character. Which, if compared to the automutilating challenges, sounds much more pleasant. The # dontjudgechallengellâ€™™ beginning, this trend came from a positive side. At least this is the story of Em Ford, the blogger of beauty and creator of #Dontjudgechallenge. In a 2015 clip from her youtube channel, the blogger takes away the trick to reveal the true identity of her in an attempt to denounce beauty standards. Photo Courtesy: Adam Watson / unsplash The attempt of her of â «Don't judge a book from the coverâ€ It has become viral, but social media quickly transformed the trend in garbage. Instead of publishing photos and videos enabling, people instead have seemed more ugly by drawing on fake one eyebrows, acne and freckles. The hashtag has been, unfortunately, hijacked by Burloni. The MomoThis challenge is a classic case of web hysteria and parents who do not speak enough with their children. According to the news of 2019, the Momo Challenge was a game on social media in which images of a demonic hen slipped into the DM of your child with commands to commit violence against others. Photo Courtesy: RYUSEI TAKAHASHI / THE JAPAN TIMES Representatives of social media and web experts have stated that there is no evidence that a child has been driven to violence from Momo Lady. After a bit of internet research, the first image of Mromo Momo was found. She wasn't a demonic hen that hunted your children. It was a sculpture of art in 2016 by a Japanese artist. The challenge of the backpack 2016 trend had the potential to be really dangerous. A person tries to run through two rows of that everyone throws their backpacks to take down the runner. These chaotic clips were fashionable for high school students, but this challenge could have seriously damaged Courtesy photo: Denisse Leon/Unsplash Do you remember how heavy your textbooks were in high school? They were huge! It is honestly a surprise that we did not all get scoliosis. Now imagine thirty bags full of heavy textbooks being thrown in your direction. Not the most pleasant (or intelligent) viral trend. CharlieCharlieChallenge v35This paranormal tendency dates back many years. In Spain, several generations of young people have played Juego de la Lapicera (the pencil game). In the 2015, he made his crossover to the states, reiterating the challenge v35Charlie. You just need two pencils and a piece of paper. Courtesy photo: Yunshui/Wikimedia First, you label four sections of the card “yes” or “no”. Then you balance two pencils perpendicular to each other, creating a grid. So, ask Charlie, the supernatural entity, a question. Supernatural forces (or wind) will aim for the right answer. It's as magical as a Magic 8-Ball. Auto Surfing This trend is also one of the most dangerous in this list. In the 1980s, car surfing is when someone jumps on top of a moving car and pretends to ride it like a surfboard. Trust us when we say, “Don't do this! According to reports from the Centers for Disease Control, 58 deaths were associated with road navigation between 1990 and August 2008. Adrenaline junkies and teenage boys attention, stay in the center of your car and stop trying to surf cars. The Banana Sprite Challenge This food challenge is disgusting for the core. The challengers are busy eating two bananas quickly and following them with a litre of Sprite. This is where things get disgusting. You win the challenge if you don't puke later. Photo Courtesy: Granger/Wikimedia Commons The challenge implies that the body cannot digest bananas and carbonated drinks at Time. It is also possible that your body ate too fast, resulting in This challenge, like any other food challenge, is not a dish that we like to eat. More from Ask.com Ask.com
